With the journal Viking and Medieval Scandinavia, the editors aim to replenish and develop the tradition of journal publication in the field of medieval Scandinavian studies. The conception of the field is broad, extending chronologically from the Viking Age and the sources of Viking activity to the end of the medieval period, while reaching geographically from Russia to North America. In subject matter the editors aim to disseminate research in all areas germane to the field. From time to time, round-table discussions and other forms of debate are published. Although the primary language of the journal is English, the research emanates from many countries and from different languages and research environments. VMS therefore welcomes contributions to the journal from all academic quarters. The journal follows the guidelines for peer-reviewed journals with anonymous assessment by two independent expert referees of each article prior to publication.
