Agricultural Specialisation and Rural Patterns of Development

Annie Antoine (ed.)

The chapters of this book draw attention to several factors relevant to processes of specialisation, such as markets, transport, and the natural environment. The contributions deal with regions in 10 countries of Europe, from Sweden to Spain and from England to Bulgaria, and with periods between the seventeenth and the twentieth centuries.

Intricate Interfaith Networks in the Middle Ages

Quotidian Jewish-Christian Contacts
Ephraim Shoham-Steiner (ed.)

The book explores the extraordinarily intricate network of connections between Christians and Jews in the medieval urban sphere. The contributors explore a number of phenomena through different disciplinary approaches. The picture that emerges is altogether more nuanced and diverse than the bipolar paradigm that has dominated previous scholarship.

Childhood Disability and Social Integration in the Middle Ages

Constructions of Impairments in Thirteenth- and Fourteenth-Century Canonization Processes

Jenni Kuuliala

In this volume, testimonies from medieval canonization processes are (for the first time) systematically used as sources for the study of medieval attitudes and everyday life concerning physical impairments, particularly of children. It offers new insights into medieval disability studies and provides an exceptionally rich window into the ways in which medieval society defined, explained, and understood children's impairments.

Agrarian Technology in the Medieval Landscape

Agrartechnik in mittelalterlichen Landschaften. Technologie agraire dans le paysage médiéval. 9th - 15th September 2013 Smolenice, Slovakia
Jan Klapšte (ed.)

This volume includes 27 papers dealing with agrarian technologies in the medieval landscape as seen in different European countries. The subject areas include cultivation, livestock husbandry, gardening, viticulture and woodland management – interpreting the concept of agrarian production in a broad sense – studied mainly on the basis of archaeology, but also using iconography, documentary evidence and archaeo-environmental approaches.

Land Assessment and Lordship in Medieval Northern Scotland

Alasdair Ross

This book re-examines the ancient landscape divisions of medieval Scotland and discusses these in a European context and demonstrates for the first time that the secular and ecclesiastical units of lordship across more than half of medieval and later Scotland were built out of an earlier Pictish (pre-ad 900) unit of land assessment, the dabhach (plural dabhaichean).

Crisis in the Later Middle Ages Beyond the Postan-Duby Paradigm

John Drendel (ed.)

These papers examine the influence exerted by Malthusian explanations of crisis in the early fourteenth century in the work of Michael Postan and Georges Duby and the enduring influence of Michael Postan's Malthusian model of economic crisis, and in particular the impact upon non-English speaking historians of Postan's ideas as interpreted by Georges Duby.

Struggling with the Environment Land Use and Productivity

Erik Thoen, Tim Soens (eds)

The aim of this volume is to find out how, when and within which structural boundaries, land was made useful for agriculture. The comparative approach of this volume in the Rural Economy and Society Series also enables a new and innovating perspective on the occurrence and impact of 'agricultural' and 'green' revolutions in the past.

Economies, Public Finances, and the Impact of Institutional Changes in Interregional Perspective

The Low Countries and Neighbouring German Territories (14th-17th centuries)

Remi van Schaik (ed.)

The way and extent to which differences in economic systems and stages of development, and the impact of institutional changes affected the political economy and fiscal systems of regions, or vice versa, is the overall theme of this volume. It contains studies about economic, financial and political structures, and developments in different regions of the Low Countries and the Lower Rhine area.
