

Journal of Urban Archaeology

Journal for Urban Archaeology will fill a hitherto overlooked and much needed publication venue for urban archaeology across all archaeological disciplines. Today most of the world's population live in cities and the study of cities across time and space has seen an immense increase in popularity over the last decades. Not only are many research branches within modern and contemporary studies dedicated to the study of urban societies and their developments, however, it has over the last decades also become a research trend, which has gained renewed attention within the fields of archaeology and history. While many archaeological journals publish articles, which deal with urban archaeology and urban development, no journal has until now focussed on urban archaeology exclusively. This is a large need within the field. It is specifically wished for that such a journal should span all archaeological disciplines and theories as well as methodologies in order to open new fields across world the archaeologies. If such a journal existed archaeologists and historians dealing with urban societies would have one focussed venue where they could publish and share the newest research on urban archaeology. Furthermore such a journal would attract wide attention outside of the core field, since in archaeology the urban is impossible to ignore. At least from 5000 BCE archaeology work with the terms of urban and state driven societies, with complex ways of living together in built environments, as well as with the processes underlying transformation of nomadic societies into nomadic ones.

Method of peer review: Double-blind undertaken by a member of the Editorial Board or an external specialist

Fields of interest: historical, cultural and religious studies, including also areas such as art history, philosophy, archeology, anthropology and social sciences

Acquisition Manager

Professor Rubina Raja,
rubina.raja@cas.au.dk

Professor Søren M. Sindbæk, farksms@cas.au.dk

Editorial Board

Professor Mike E. Smith, Arizona State University, USA
 Professor Roland Fletcher, University of Sidney, Australia
 Professor Alain Schnapp, INRA, Paris, France
 Professor Monica Smith, UCLA, USA
 Professor Annette Haug, Kiel University, Germany

Submissions

This series warmly welcomes volume proposals for both monographs and thematically coherent essay collections.

*Main Language(s) accepted: English
 Additional Languages: French, German, Italian, Spanish*

Author Information

Brepols Publishers' general guidelines in English and a proposal form for authors and editors are available at:
<http://www.brepols.net/Pages/Getfile.aspx?dlfi=88>

All volumes in this series are evaluated by an Editorial Board, strictly on academic grounds, based on reports prepared by referees who have been commissioned by virtue of their specialism in the appropriate field. The Board ensures that the screening is done independently and without conflicts of interest. The definitive texts supplied by authors are also subject to review by the Board before being approved for publication.

Why Publish with Brepols?

- Authors work closely with and benefit from the expertise of the Editorial Board.
- Comprehensive peer review ensures books published with Brepols have a reputation for high-quality scholarship.
- Continuity of care - authors work with the same publishing manager throughout the publication process.
- We offer comprehensive copyediting by experienced editors with a background in Medieval or Early Modern Studies.
- All volumes published with Brepols are distributed and marketed worldwide.