

New Approaches in Archaeology

This peer-reviewed series provides a venue for thematically-focused, academically rigorous scholarship in archaeology and related disciplines. With a clear focus on empirical analysis and interpretation, the series promotes the publication of cutting-edge primary research that can provide in-depth, focused, and critical interpretations of topical themes and ideas. Monographs and edited collections are invited that cover aspects of archaeology from the Palaeolithic to the early modern, and that have a primary focus on the Old World, with a geographical scope ranging from the North Atlantic and Scandinavia to the Mediterranean, and from Portugal in the west to the Caucasus in the east. In doing so, the series aims to provide a space for the discussion of archaeological activities and material from a data-rich perspective, as well as to encourage dialogue between different theoretical and methodological approaches.

Method of peer review: Single-blind undertaken by a member of the Editorial Board or an external specialist

Fields of interest: Archaeology, archaeological theory, archaeology practice, material culture, landscape studies, urban studies, environmental archaeology, epigraphy, iconography, culture and society, cultural heritage/archaeological resource management.

All volumes in this series are evaluated by an Editorial Board, strictly on academic grounds, based on reports prepared by referees who have been commissioned by virtue of their specialism in the appropriate field. The Board ensures that the screening is done independently and without conflicts of interest. The definitive texts supplied by authors are also subject to review by the Board before being approved for publication.
