Publication of the Studium Biblicum Franciscanum

The Liber Annuus, an annual of about 500 pages, publishes studies in biblical, linguistic and archaeological disciplines. It also includes preliminary reports on excavations conducted by the professors of the Studium Biblicum Franciscanum in Jerusalem and their collaborators in Israel and in other research institutions. The journal was founded between 1950 and 1951 by a professor of the Studium Biblicum Franciscanum, an institution of which it constitutes the annual publication and of whose professors, in their respective fields of research, proposals of scientific contributions, integrated by those of scholars of other institutions and academies. In addition to contributions of an exegetical, linguistic and literary nature on the Old and New Testaments, the Liber Annuus publishes studies on the history and archaeology of the biblical world in general, and of Judaism and the first Christian era in particular. Each year the archaeologists of the Studium Biblicum Franciscanum publish here the first reports relative to the excavations carried out in Israel, Palestine, Jordan, Syria and Egypt.
