

CENTAURUS

JOURNAL OF THE EUROPEAN SOCIETY
FOR THE HISTORY OF SCIENCE

to become fully
Open Access in 2022
(with the help of libraries and institutions)

The European Society for the History of Science (ESHS) and Brepols announce a partnership to publish the Society's flagship journal Centaurus. Journal of the European Society for the History of Science fully in Open Access from 2022 onwards, at no cost to the authors or readers.

The Society and Brepols are very proud to announce that they will collaborate, making Centaurus Open Access in 2022 via the Subscribe-to-Open publishing model:

Theodore Arabatzis,

President of the European Society for the History of Science:

'We are thrilled to relaunch Centaurus, the official journal of ESHS, in partnership with Brepols, a distinguished publisher in the field of history of science. Our journal plays a central role in the life of our Society and is indispensable in fostering and disseminating excellent historical research on past science and related cultural practices. Our joint endeavor with Brepols is meant to turn Centaurus into a fully Open Access journal, at no cost to its authors, and, thereby, to make it freely accessible to the worldwide history of science community.'

Paul De Jongh,

Managing Director of Brepols:

'We are very honoured to partner with the ESHS to publish their prestigious journal Centaurus. It is our mission to deliver high-quality services and content, for the widest readership possible, at the lowest cost to the academic community. We believe Subscribe-to-Open can fulfil this mission and become a fair and inclusive route to Open Access. For this, we count on the support and loyalty of libraries and institutes worldwide, to create a solid Open Access funding alternative for the humanities.'

Libraries and institutions interested in supporting Centaurus can contact: periodicals@brepols.net

Authors are invited to submit their articles here: www.manuscriptmanager.net/centaurus

More information will follow soon. Questions can be asked directly to: open.access@brepols.net

SUBSCRIBE TO OPEN

Subscribe-to-Open is a Coalition-S endorsed solution for sustainable and equitable open access publishing that provides an alternative to article processing charges (APCs), the mechanism used by most open access journals. It uses existing library relationships and subscriptions to convert gated journals to open access. Institutions simply subscribe or renew their subscriptions – there are no additional processes – and, as long as subscription revenues are sustainable, the year's issues are published open access.

About European Society for the History of Science

Founded in 2003, the European Society for the History of Science promotes European cooperation in the fields of history of science, technology and medicine. Members of the ESHS are located throughout the world. <http://www.eshs.org/>

About Brepols Publishers

Brepols Publishers is an international independent academic publisher of works in the humanities, founded in 1796. They publish works with an outstanding academic reputation, mainly within the disciplines of history and archaeology, language and literature, music, art and architectural history. Besides publications under its own imprint, Brepols distributes works from many world-class academic institutions. Brepols has offices in Turnhout (Belgium), Nottingham (UK), Los Angeles (USA), and Thessaloniki (Greece).

BREPOLS