Language Commonality and Literary Communities in Early Modern England
Translation, Transmission, Transfer
Laetitia Samonetto, Rémi Vuillemin (eds)

The volume focuses on the role of translation and lexical borrowing in the expansion of specific English lexicons (erudite, technical, or artisanal) as evidenced in printed texts from the early modern period. It considers how language shapes identity in social, religious, philosophical, artistic and literary contexts, and is in turn shaped by claims of social, religious, philosophical, artistic and literary identity.
