LEMA Studies in the Archaeology & History of the Levantine & Eastern Mediterranean

LEMA explores the archaeology and history of the Eastern Mediterranean (from Northern Egypt and the North-Eastern African Coast, across the Levant and into Greece and the Southern Balkans) from the Lower Palaeolithic until the Hellenistic Period. This series aims to bring together regions that have traditionally been treated as separate entities by different disciplines, but that from at least the Bronze Age onwards were in fact closely linked — connections attested to not only by material culture but also through the exchange of ideas and technology transfer. Covering archaeology, history, and cognate disciplines, LEMA welcomes both studies of individual sites within the geographical and chronological boundaries, as well as synthetic overviews covering smaller parts of the study area. Studies focusing on interregional contacts within the Eastern Mediterranean (and beyond) are particularly welcome. Together with its companion series ARATTA, ARAXES, OXUS, and SUBARTU, LEMA forms part of the ARWA collection associated with the International Association for Archaeological Research in Western & Central Asia.

All volumes in this series are evaluated by an Editorial Board, strictly on academic grounds, based on reports prepared by referees who have been commissioned by virtue of their specialism in the appropriate field. The Board ensures that the screening is done independently and without conflicts of interest. The definitive texts supplied by authors are also subject to review by the Board before being approved for publication.
