Futuristic Fiction, Utopia, and Satire in the Age of the Enlightenment

Samuel Madden's 'Memoirs of the Twentieth Century' (1733)

Giulia Iannuzzi

The Memoirs of the Twentieth Century (1733) is a fascinating piece of early eighteenth-century literature and an important chapter in the history of futuristic imagination and of an increasing global interconnectedness. Featuring an essay that contextualises the novel and an annotated edition of the text, this study explores issues central to the Enlightenment project: the negotiation of what falls within the limits of credibility, the existence of irrational beliefs in The Age of Reason, and issues of control over the circulation of knowledge.

Mapping Artistic Networks
Eighteenth-Century Italian Theatre and Opera Across Europe

Tatiana Korneeva (ed.)

The essays critically assess how the italianità, the notion we use in the sense of the image of otherness that Europeans wished to assimilate and musical style, were defined but also challenged through the productions of Italian theatre and opera abroad and their encounters with national traditions. This collection aims to contribute to a broader discussion of cultural transfer and transmission of artistic practices in music and theatre, and migrations of artists and texts across the continent, while also exploring for the first time the East of Europe

The Fashioning of French

Identity, Production, Networks
*Barbara Nestola, Benoît Dratwicky, Julien
Dubruque, Thomas Leconte (éd.)*

This study aims to reconsider the Académie royale de musique (1672–1791), as the forerunners to the Paris Opera, from a new angle, thanks to an interdisciplinary approach and three sustained motivations: questioning the institution's very nature, as well as its place and status in the French academic network; highlighting practical, logistical, and material questions as yet unexplored; and reevaluating not only its interactions with other theaters in Paris, at court, and in the provinces, but also the ways its repertoire spread in general.
