The ARWA Collection comprises nine peer-reviewed series dedicated to the archaeology and history of an area that spans from the Danube and the Balkans across to the Indus, and from the Gulf of Aden up to the Altai. Covering a time period that stretches from the Lower Palaeolithic up to the Hellenistic (and even beyond), these companion series shed new light on the cultures and technologies that saw hunter-gatherer societies transform into sophisticated civilisations.

The series of the ARWA Collection aim together to explore the concepts of identity, diversity, and contact over time and space. Through this approach, they promote research that cuts across not only geographical and chronological boundaries, but also those that exist between disciplines.
